Moana is the daughter of the village chief of Motunui. Even as a toddler, she loved hearing Gramma Tala tell how the mother island Te Fiti emerged from the sea long ago. Then, a trickster demigod named Maui stole a sacred stone, the heart of Te Fiti, and awakened the demon Te Kā. The legend says someone must sail beyond the reef, find Maui, and take him to restore the heart of Te Fiti before a darkness takes over Motunui.

Some of Moana's friends find Gramma Tala's story a little too scary. Search the room for these terrified tots:

Moana is drawn to the ocean. Her father Tui warns, "You don't go out there. It's dangerous." But the ocean seems to speak to her. While young Moana plays with the waves, she spies something shining in the water—the heart of Te Fiti! Gramma Tala rescues the stone and keeps it in her shell necklace for safekeeping.

Moana waves to the sea, and it waves back! See if you can spot Moana and these Motunui villagers:

Years later, after Gramma Tala gives her the heart of Te Fiti, Moana knows it's her destiny to find Maui and accompany him to return the sacred stone. She takes an ancient canoe—and, accidentally, a rooster named Heihei—and hits the high seas in search of the legendary demigod. When she finds him, he is not at all what she expected. He is not only full of himself, he's full of tattoos that move!

Maui's tattoos tell how he defeated monsters and gave mortals everything from fire to coconuts. Scan the scene for these items from Maui's amazing tales:

As Moana and Maui argue about whether or not he'll help her, Moana's boat is attacked by the Kakamora, mean little coconut-armored bandits. To make matters worse, Heihei swallows the heart of Te Fiti, then gets snatched by a Kakamoran warrior. While Maui defends the boat, Moana has to act fast to get the rooster and the stone back!

The Kakamora are surprisingly cute, considering they wield giant, razor sharp spears! Can you spot these coconutty crooks?

Mauui's shape-shifting abilities come from his magical fishhook, which he lost a thousand years ago along with the heart of Te Fiti. Maui agrees to help Moana restore the heart on the condition that they first get his hook. The two travel to Lalotai, the realm of monsters, where Tamatoa, a giant killer crab, has been keeping Maui's hook as a souvenir.

Tamatoa likes to "wear" all sorts of treasure on his shell. See if you can spot these pieces of deep-sea bling:

Moana convinces Maui to take on the demon Te Kā and restore the heart of Te Fiti. She sails toward Te Kā even after Maui tells her to turn back, and his hook is cracked in the fierce battle! Angry, Maui leaves with his broken hook. Moana decides to return the heart of Te Fiti herself. The monster hurls lava and boulders as she approaches, but Moana doesn't give up. Fortunately, Maui doesn't give up on her either!

Maui can turn from a bug to a shark to a bird in a flash. Spot him as he shape-shifts from one animal form into another before becoming a hawk and flying over to help his friend:

Moana sails through fiery bursts of lava while Maui confronts Te Kā. Singing the song of her ancestors, Moana gets close enough to return the heart of Te Fiti. Suddenly, the mother island starts to reveal herself! Amid the blooming flowers, Te Fiti returns Maui's hook, which was destroyed in the battle.

As the island paradise begins to bloom, search the lush, green scene for Moana and these creatures and objects:

Back in her village, Moana is a hero! She has brought life back to the island and the art of navigation back to her people. Now, she is a master wayfinder, leading other explorers to new lands. The spirit of her ancestors and the love of her friends and family have taught her to always listen to that voice inside her that says, "I am Moana!"

Can you find Moana and these friends and followers as she sets off for new adventures?
